Concert Technologies Business Model Supports US Economic Stimulus Package

Concert Technologies Celebrates 14 Years of Economic Support at Local Level

DULLES, VA, JUNE 22, 2009 – Concert Technologies celebrates its fourteenth anniversary on June 22, 2009. This also marks fourteen years of supporting communities through its Local Multi-Service Deployment Method in which local partners are used to deploy technology on a nationwide scale.

Nationwide Technology Rollout Stimulus Support

Concert Technologies' business model includes the management of experienced local contractors throughout the United States. This model funnels money into communities at the local level which in turn acts as a catalyst for growth. With over 140,000 rollouts completed since 1995, Concert Technologies has provided significant support of local communities in even the most remote areas of the US.

“The current administration’s stimulus plan to boost the economy is the same method we’ve used for technology rollouts,” said Dennis Mazaris, President and Founder of Concert Technologies. “We’ve known since the beginning that the most efficient way to deploy technology on a nationwide scale is to directly manage local, experienced partners. This means more money in the hands of our partners which translates to more growth in their local areas where our customer’s project is being implemented. It’s a win-win for everyone involved.”

14 Year Anniversary Celebration

Concert Technologies plans to celebrate its 14 year anniversary with festivities for staff and appreciation to its customers for all the years of support. “We’re very proud to have served the technology industry for almost a decade and a half,” said Mazaris. “In this industry, that means something. And we plan to continue to do our part for years to come.”
